His forensic approach means that he is considered a knowledgeable and sensible expert with the wider instructing party community.

CLINICAL EXPERIENCE:

Dr Mark Alexander-Williams stands at the forefront of private Pain Management consultancy in London. His journey in medicine commenced at The London Hospital, where he also started his anaesthetic training. His professional path led him through roles as an SHO in Bury St Edmunds, followed by a Registrar position in Leicester and within the South Trent rotation.

Taking a hiatus from clinical duties prior to achieving Senior Registrar status, Dr Alexander-Williams delved into research, exploring innovative methods of opiate administration and investigating the impact of anaesthetic agents on respiratory function. During his tenure as a senior registrar, he undertook a sabbatical year in Melbourne, Australia. Later, as a consultant, he devoted six months to refining his skills in intervention pain techniques during a sabbatical in London.

Driven by a passion for tackling complex pain challenges, Dr Alexander-Williams finds himself immersed in diverse cases. A significant portion of his referrals, amounting to three-quarters, relate to back pain and sciatica. He specialises in incorporating invasive methodologies like radiofrequency lesioning within a comprehensive biopsychosocial care model.
