CONSULTANT THORACIC SURGEON

CLINICAL EXPERIENCE:

Mr Scarci is a highly respected Consultant Thoracic Surgeon with over 10 years of experience, currently practicing at Imperial College Healthcare NHS Trust. His journey started in Malta, honed at the Essex Cardiothoracic Centre and Guy's and St Thomas' in London, before further refining his skills through a 6-month fellowship in minimally invasive surgery at the University of Toronto. In 2011, his expertise earned him a Consultant Thoracic Surgeon position at Papworth Hospital. Following this, he went on to work at University College London Hospital, San Gerardo Hospital, Italy and Imperial College NHS Healthcare Trust, where he is currently based.

Mr Scarci is renowned for his dedication to personalised care, working closely with a multidisciplinary team to ensure optimal outcomes for each patient. He welcomes inquiries about a wide range of surgical and non-surgical treatments, spanning chest wall deformities, lung cancer, rib fractures, and even hyperhidrosis and facial blushing.

His expertise shines in key areas like complex chest wall cancers and deformities, single-incision lung cancer removal, emphysema, and correcting failed pectus deformity repairs. He stays abreast of the latest advancements and actively contributes to research in these fields.

Beyond clinical practice, Mr Scarci holds prestigious positions as an honorary clinical senior lecturer at Imperial College London and a senior clinical tutor at the University of Cambridge. He regularly presents at conferences, shares his knowledge as an editor for esteemed journals, and has authored over 130 publications and four books on thoracic surgery.

Mr Scarci's dedication extends beyond patient care. He has previously led working groups for the European Society of Thoracic Surgeons and actively serves on NICE committees. His commitment to excellence has been recognised with awards like the NHS Clinical Excellence award in 2013.
